Page Printers for Communications and Data Processing

As the largest independent supplier of printout systems, Anelex builds equipment used in communications and data processing systems the world over. Anelex facilities include over 3½ acres of plant and equipment, plus specialized subsidiaries and divisions, and an international headquarters . . . but there is far more to Anelex than these alone.

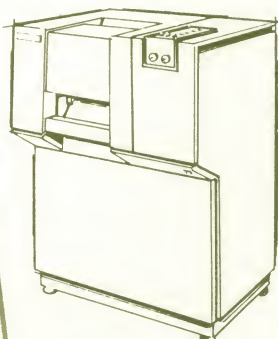

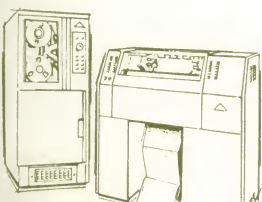

At Anelex is the talented nucleus of people who pioneered the concept of the high speed printer since 1950, and have since developed many variations of such equipment. Through its people Anelex possesses a unique combination of mechanical and electronic capabilities, and a philosophy that balances technical innovation with the highest regard for reliability and customer service.

Indeed, the Anelex name has grown to signify the utmost reliability in arduous service, both in civilian and military environments.

Anelex ingenuity and experience are on call to serve your peripheral equipment needs. Whether you require a standard low or high-speed printer, a remote terminal printout system, a communications teleprinter or a special purpose buffered printer system, Anelex can solve your problem with field-tested equipment and proven designs, either in standard configurations or in new combinations created to solve special problems.

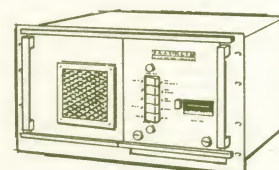

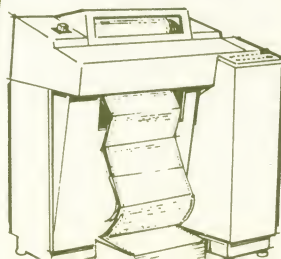

Further information and detailed specifications on all standard and special products are available immediately on request.
